Gov. Ralph DLG Torres signed yesterday morning House Bill 22-95 Senate Substitute 1 into law, paving the way for each CNMI government retiree to finally get their $1,000 bonuses.

Members of the Senate, the governor's Cabinet, and a few retirees came together yesterday to witness Torres sign H.B. 22-95 SS 1 into Public Law 22-17.

Before signing the bill, Torres apologized to CNMI retirees for waiting this long for their bonuses but he assured them it is now officially underway.

With the impeachment trial of Gov. Ralph DLG Torres fast approaching, members of the House of Representatives are concerned about the lack of evidence and prosecutors in the case and are questioning how an impeachment trial would go forward without these two things.

With the Senate pushing forward with the impeachment trial in less than two weeks, Rep. Leila Staffler (D-Saipan) questions how the process would go without evidence to

Resolution for second local stimulus remains pending with Senate

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES
kimberly_esmores@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The joint resolution the House of Representatives introduced to support a second round of local stimulus payments in the form of cash or direct deposits remains pending in the Senate and House lawmakers are urging senators to act on it soon.

During a House session last Wednesday, Rep. Tina Sablan (D-Saipan) stated that House Joint Resolution 22-12 that endorses the issuance of a second local stimulus payment of $500 per resident and $500 per dependent remains pending.

"The [joint resolution] proposes a new local stimulus in the form of not debit cards but cash payments to qualified taxpayers in the CNMI as well as their dependents, and I'd like to ask our Senate colleagues to consider that," she said.

Sablan noted that the administration has acknowledged for months the need for a second local stimulus but is heavily leaning in the direction of debit cards while the resolution proposes a stimulus in the form of cash instead.

"The administration has so far at least acknowledged that there's a need for a local stimulus. It sounds like they're still leaning in the direction of debit cards, which we know came with all kinds of inconveniences and hardships," Sablan.

The problem with debit cards, Sablan said, is that, in addition to the many restrictions, after the card expired last March, the funds that remained were no longer available. This has become an issue because many opted to save that money for rainy days but lost it and were not even aware of it.

"We're learning from constituents that debit cards have expired and they weren't aware that there was an expiration date. The point is that all of these inconveniences would not be an issue if we would just give taxpayers who need this assistance. I wanted to ask our colleagues for your assistance in reaching out to the Senate to show their support for this resolution for local stimulus for our people," she said.

Two-in-one events at 41st Flame Tree Arts Festival

By LEIGH GASES
leigh_gases@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The Flame Tree Arts Festival is back starting today, Friday, April 29, at the Sugar King Park and the NMI Museum grounds.

After a two-year hiatus due to the COVID-19 pandemic, this year's Flame Tree Arts Festival is being considered as the 39th, 40th, and 41st editions. More uniquely, this year's edition will consist of a combined arts festival and a ukulele festival, all taking place across three days starting Friday and ending on Sunday.

The Marianas Ukulele Festival will be from 2pm to 4:30pm on all three days: April 29, April 30, and May 1. Today's ukulele festival will kick off with performances by Saipan Community School, followed by Marv and Jay, Avry Marianas, Ray Peter, and finally, the Marianas High School Hui Ukulele Club. The festival will be run Larry Lee.

Right after that, the Flame Tree Arts Festival will begin at 5pm and last until 11pm on all three days as well. The event will feature 44 artists from Saipan, 28 delegates from Rota, and one from Tinian.

The food vendors will be located at the Sugar King Park, while the artists' exhibitions and entertainment will be located at the NMI Museum grounds.

There will also be four outreach groups from Saipan: the Karidat Victim Hotline, Division of Youth Services, American Memorial Park, and the Child Care and Development Fund.

There will be a total of seven food vendors plus the food vendors that are originally at the Sugar King Park. The vendors will be Shirley's Coffee Shop, Java Joes, All Star Restaurant, Furusato, Island Grinds, CF Premier Foods - potluck catering, and Annie's Ice Cup.

Parker Yobei, executive director of the Commonwealth Council for Arts and Culture, said they chose the new location for the arts festival because the council "wanted to try something different for the event. The park is nice and shady. It is maintained really well and lots of people haven't really seen the park so we hope they take this time during the weekend to come out."

At the event, there will be a survey to get feedback whether to keep the festival location at the park or back in Susupe.

Yobei invites everyone to come out and enjoy themselves with their families and friends during the weekend. He reminds the public of the road closures on Middle Road for everyone's safety.

Parking spaces will be anywhere that is allowed near the festival grounds and "a short walk to the festival is good exercise," added Yobei.

Yobei thanks Lee of the Ukulele Association and all the departments and sponsors.

CCAC coordinator Sepe Gloriana Teuira says the event and venue are ready to welcome the public.

Repeat offender allegedly caught with 'ice'

Former Drug Court graduate, Robert Camacho Torres, is facing drug charges again.

Torres, 43, was charged Tuesday with possession of a controlled substance and trafficking of a controlled substance, methamphetamine, or "ice." His bail amount is set at $100,000, and his preliminary hearing will be on May 4, 2022.

Torres was arrested last April 8, based on a warrant signed by Superior Court Associate Judge Joseph N.

Camacho.

According to court papers, Drug Enforcement Task Force learned of Torres' drug dealing activities through a "buy-walk" operation conducted with a "confidential informant." Torres was allegedly trafficking ice at Room 209 of the Capital

Hotel in Garapan.

Torres was first arrested in July 2019 for possession of "ice" after a traffic stop. (Leigh Gases)

Justices' call to overrule Insular Cases is taken up in Supreme Court petition

Last week in United States v. Vaello Madero, Supreme Court justices Neil Gorsuch and Sonia Sotomayor wrote to express a shared "hope [that] the court will soon recognize that the Constitution's application should never depend on... the misguided framework of the Insular Cases," a series of controversial Plessy-era decisions that created a doctrine of "separate and unequal" status for residents of U.S. territories.

Gorsuch declared that "[t]he Insular Cases have no foundation in the Constitution and rest instead on racial stereotypes. They deserve no place in our law." And Sotomayor called the Insular Cases "both odious and wrong."

Last year, a divided panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit expressly relied on the Insular Cases to reverse an historic district court decision recognizing that the Citizenship Clause of the 14th Amendment guarantees birthright citizenship to people born in U.S. territories. Today, John Fitisemanu—who is denied recognition as a U.S. citizen based on his birth in American Samoa—petitioned the U.S. Supreme Court to take up his case, recognize him as a U.S. citizen, and overrule the Insular Cases.

"I was born on U.S. soil, have a U.S. passport, and pay thousands of dollars in taxes each year to the federal government. But based on a discriminatory federal law, I am denied recognition as a U.S. citizen. As a result, I am a citizen of nowhere, unable to vote in state, federal, or even local elections. This isn't just wrong, it's unconstitutional," said Fitisemanu, who was born in American Samoa and for the past 20 years has lived in Utah. "I am shocked that federal courts and the U.S. Justice Department continue to rely on the racist Insular Cases to deny me citizenship. I am hopeful the Supreme Court will take up my case to turn the page on the Insular Cases and finally recognize that Congress can no longer deny citizenship to people born in U.S. territories."

"The Insular Cases are a

stain on the Supreme Court, and it is gratifying to see Supreme Court justices begin to acknowledge that directly," said Neil Weare, president and founder of Equally American, which represents the Fitisemanu plaintiffs and advocates for equality and civil rights for the 3.6 million residents of U.S. territories, 98% of whom are people of color.

"Who is a U.S. citizen under the Constitution is a fundamental question for our democracy, and one the Citizenship Clause of the 14th Amendment was intended to answer once and for all. That in 2022 there remains uncertainty over whether people born in U.S. territories are 'born...in the United States' for purposes of the Citizenship Clause and whether the racist Insular Cases remain good law highlights why the Supreme Court needs to finally answer these questions," added Weare.

The central question in Fitisemanu is whether U.S. territories like American Samoa are "in the United States" for purposes of the Citizenship Clause. While the Supreme Court has not squarely resolved that question, last week in Vaello Madero the court acknowledged in its opening sentence that "The United States includes five territories: American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Mariana Islands, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico."

The Fitisemanu plaintiffs initially prevailed in their case, with District Court Judge Clark Waddoups ruling in 2019 that under the Citizenship Clause Congress has no power to deny citizenship to individuals born in U.S. territories. On appeal, a divided panel of the 10th Circuit expressly relied on the Insular Cases to reverse 2-1, with each judge writing separately. Plaintiffs' petition for review by the full 10th Circuit was not granted, but two judges wrote a lengthy dissenting opinion on the "exceptional importance" of bringing resolution to these questions. Gorsuch specifically cited the 10th Circuit's decision in Fitisemanu as a reason for the Supreme Court to finally overrule the Insular Cases, since "[I]ower courts continue to feel constrained to apply their terms."

Last year, the Biden-Harris Department of Justice controversially continued to rely on the Insular Cases to argue against birthright citizenship for people born in U.S. territories, even after Members of Congress had called on the Justice Department to condemn the Insular Cases. Earlier this year the ACLU, NAACP LDF, LatinoJustice, Hispanic Federation and other prominent civil rights organizations issued a similar call. The U.S. House of Representatives is also considering a House resolution condemning the Insular Cases, holding the first-ever congressional hearing on the Insular Cases last year.

The Insular Cases have also received significant academic criticism in recent years. Earlier this month the Columbia Human Rights Law Review held a symposium on the "Future of the Insular Cases." The Yale Law Journal will soon be publishing a Special Issue on the Law of the Territories, including an article by Columbia law professor Christina Ponsa-Kraus titled The Insular Cases Run Amok, which responds to what Gorsuch called in Vaello Madero "recent attempts" by lower courts and others "to repurpose the Insular Cases," with Gorsuch specifically citing the 10th Circuit's decision in Fitisemanu. In 2020, the Yale Law Journal Forum also held a symposium on the Insular Cases to honor the memory of Judge Juan R. Torruella, a chief critic of the Insular Cases.

The American Samoan government has joined federal defendants in embracing the Insular Cases and arguing that the question of citizenship in the territories is up to Congress. Meanwhile, current and former elected officials from Puerto Rico, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands have argued as "friends of the court" in the case that the Insular Cases should be rejected and people born in U.S. territories recognized as birthright citizens.

The Supreme Court is expected to consider whether to grant review of Fitisemanu v. United States later this year. (PR) support the impeachment and without prosecutors to defend the Articles of Impeachment.

"I actually have no idea what will happen next because with a trial scheduled but no prosecutors or evidence provided, I'm not quite sure how they will proceed forward," she said.

Staffler remains optimistic and hopes the Senate will consider the pleas of House members to amend their rules and allow the House its five prosecutors and an extension to properly submit the House impeachment records.

"Perhaps they will take into consideration our requests, and requests of multiple members of the Senate, and allow the House prosecutors to participate. Rules can be amended, and so possibly that could be a solution to many of the is-suces that were brought up by [House of Representative] members, the public, and the senators themselves," she said.

In any case, Staffler said, it's hard to hear just one side of the story and that is what will happen if there are no prosecutors or impeachment records.

"It's really hard to have a case without having both sides share their side. We hope that the Senate will consider allowing for the House impeachment prosecutorial team to be able to do the work that we've been preparing to do. With respect to the record itself, some of the technicalities that they refer to are minor things that we are more than willing to fix. ... House clerk Ms. Linda Muna did request for an extension. Although she was denied, perhaps they can reconsider that request and give us that opportunity to fix the record so that they can deem it appropriate enough for them to look at it," Staffler said.

The Precinct 5 representative said the House stands by their records and only hopes that the Senate and the public are given a chance to see these records that they have worked tirelessly on for the past two years.

"We stand by that record that if they and every member of the public gets a chance to see the receipts, to see the documentation that is available to prove without a doubt and without a question, that our governor has made many financial decisions that may not be in the best interest of the people," she said.

According to a previous memorandum issued by Senate President Jude U. Hofschneider (R-Tinian), he explained that the House of Representatives was prohibited from participating and prosecuting in the hearing for Torres' motion to dismiss the Articles of Impeachment because the Senate-selected House impeachment prosecutor, Rep. Corina Magofna (D-Saipan), allegedly failed to timely file an appearance in the matter pursuant to Senate Impeachment Rule 7(a)(2).

Also, the House clerk failed to submit the House impeachment record in support of the Articles of Impeachment in compliance with Senate Impeachment Rule 9(e).

es. With that said, I also like to thank the Senate majority for their efforts to find a solution to make this happen," he said.

Torres said that retirees have always been in one of his highest priorities and they deserve this long overdue bonus for all that they've contributed to the CNMI.

"Since I got [in] this office, retirees have always been a priority under my administration, and I continue to make it a priority. Again, giving the retirees their bonus is not a political move. It is the right thing to do. All retirees come from all different aspects of life and different party affiliation. But I have to acknowledge the hard work that all retirees have done in their tenure in government work. This is also another approach to say thank you for all the hard work that they've done," Torres said.

Last Wednesday, H.B. 22-95 Senate Substitute 1 gained a unanimous vote in favor of its passage, with 16 members of the House of Representatives voting "yes" and one abstention.

The most important amendment made to the bill that gained the support of the entire House of Representatives was the re-appropriation of funding from general fund personnel lapses instead of reprogramming funds from some government units: the Marianas Visitors Authority, Department of Finance, and the Office of the Governor.

Other amendments include the distribution of the retirement bonuses, and who holds the expenditure authority.

In an interview with Sen. Vinnie Sablan (R-Saipan), who led the amendment of the bill, he said the amendments were the product of the collaboration among his office, Finance Secretary David Atalig, and Senate finance specialist Dave Demapan.

He explained that the process of identifying an alternate source of funding was a tedious one and took several days to complete. However, now that it has been done, he hopes it's something the House and the Senate can agree on.

RESOLUTION

tee, introduced the bipartisan House joint resolution back in January.

The resolution follows the same eligibility guidelines as the previous federal stimulus packages for households that meet adjusted gross income guidelines of up to $75,000 per individual or $150,000 for married couples.

The joint resolution strongly urges the new local economic impact payment to be made directly to qualified households instead of limiting spending options to local vendors that accept Visa debit cards, as with the previous local stimulus distribution.

An 'illustrated presentation' explores Takeuchi's photos

LEIGH GASES

By LEIGH GASES

CORRESPONDENT

Writer-photographer Floyd K. Takeuchi made a promise to himself in his art form "to focus on specific stories in particular that did three things: that they celebrated beauty, respected tradition, and honored values."

That personal vow was the prism through which he did his work through his photographs in the Marshall Islands and in the Federated States of Micronesia. All that came together in an "illustrated presentation" called "Tropical Light" that Takeuchi did Wednesday evening for free at the American Memorial Park theater.

Takeuchi presented his photography work done over the past 10 to 12 years in Micronesia and FSM, along with some photos that he took from Saipan in 1964 when they moved from the Marshall Islands. He presented some of the photographs from his first shoot at Xavier High School in Chuuk as a photojournalist, his photography from the 10th Festival of Pacific Arts held in American Samoa in 2008, some photographs of "halau" or school of hula in Hawaii, some of his black and white photographs, landscapes, and portraits—all of which held the AMP crowd last Wednesday night entranced.

GCC launches search for mascot

MANGILAO—Guam Community College is calling all students, former students, alumni and employees to join the GCC Mascot search contest. Submissions will be accepted from April 27 through May 27.

The winning mascot will unify and embody the GCC school spirit and serve as a public symbol of GCC’s continuing effort to equip our students with skills to achieve their life and career goals. The mascot will be aligned with GCC’s current brand, helping define and identify our institution for both internal and external communities.

A Mascot Design Committee has been established and has defined the college’s brand personality as prestigious, original, classic, striving for excellence, honoring our heritage, strength, power, friendly but fierce. The winning mascot design must reflect this personality and incorporate the College’s school colors of aqua blue and white.

GCC has not had a mascot since the Tradesman, more than three decades ago.

A panel of judges will provide its recommendation of the top three finalists who will move on to the final selection round by June 1. The Mascot Design Committee will then select the winning entry that will be unveiled during the first week of July 2022.

The winner will also receive a monetary prize of $500 and the first official print of the GCC Mascot. For more information on the contest www.guamcc.edu/gccmascot or email gcc.mascot@guamcc.edu. (PR)

Blaming Biden only goes so far in explaining current global inflation woes

A new International Monetary Fund report suggests that the economic hiccups roiling American politics are actually being felt worldwide and probably have little or nothing to do with President Joe Biden's leadership. Biden certainly isn't blameless for at least a portion of the nation's current inflationary spiral, but the monetary fund's report makes clear that the entire world would be in economic turmoil regardless.

Global annualized inflation ranges between 5.7% and 8.7%—suggesting that the United States, at 7% inflation, is far from alone in feeling the strains of the post-pandemic recovery. Adding to those global woes are shortages of petroleum and grains posed by Russia's invasion of Ukraine. The problems are likely to get worse before they get better, according to the World Economic Outlook report released last week.

"Economic damage from the conflict will contribute to a significant slowdown in global growth in 2022 and add to inflation. Fuel and food prices have increased rapidly, hitting vulnerable populations in low-income countries hardest," the report says. Global economic growth rates, humming at 6.1% in 2021, could drop to around 3.7% this year and next because of impacts from the Ukraine war.

Biden took office just as the pandemic was starting to subside worldwide. Before then, consumer spending had plummeted amid a worldwide shutdown. U.S. unemployment rates peaked at 14.7% during the Trump administration.

The widespread availability of coronavirus vaccines in early 2021 helped spur a return to pre-pandemic employment and consumer spending patterns. The global supply chain was nowhere near ready to meet the sudden surge in demand. Factories couldn't ramp up fast enough. The cargo demand overwhelmed shipping and trucking companies. Major ports backed up. But consumer demand kept surging, unabated, causing prices to skyrocket.

Motorists got back into their cars and hit the road again, leading to a sudden surge in demand for gasoline. Pump prices soared just as Russian leader Vladimir Putin decided to invade Ukraine. That prompted harsh international sanctions that forced a dramatic cutoff of oil and natural gas exports from Russia, the world's largest exporter.

Republicans blame the price surge on Biden's moves to review domestic pipeline plans and to delay some offshore drilling leases, but those decisions only affect production far in the future, not current supplies.

Biden did miscalculate in his assessment of the need for a greater U.S. economic stimulus as vaccines were rolling out. His $1.9 trillion stimulus package likely contributed to the inflationary spiral. But the International Monetary Fund report makes clear that, in countries far beyond U.S. shores, the same inflationary consequences and energy shortages are occurring despite having nothing to do with Biden's decision-making.

Much as Republicans are trying to make Biden's economic management the focus in their midterm campaigning, the reality is that he bears minimal responsibility even though he's taking all the blame.

Putin's war is shattering my Russian identity

By ANASTASIA EDEL
LOS ANGELES TIMES

"Russia is not Putin." As a lecturer in Russian history, and an ex-Soviet Russian American, I have said these words many times. But now the treasures of Russia's culture—its poetry, novels, movies, theater, symphonies—must be weighed against the current regime's premeditated murder of the innocent. In this new world, the rest of Russian history and culture is reduced to mere backstory by Feb. 24.

Start with what Ivan Turgenev called the "great, powerful, righteous and free Russian language" that should comfort me in "days of dreary musings." As a writer whose sensibility was shaped by Russian and Soviet classics, I took great pains to teach Russian to my American-born children. I wanted them to read Alexander Pushkin's verses, Anton Chekhov's stories and Mikhail Bulgakov's novels—all those books my husband and I brought with us to America—in the language in which they were written.

But I cannot view Russian today as righteous or free. I hear it as the language of Russian occupiers and officials telling Ukrainians to surrender, or of Ukrainian defenders swearing at a Russian warship: a tool for battlefield exchanges. It's the language wielded by mothers in Kharkiv, Kyiv and Bucha to curse the killers of their children. The war, cynically unfolding during the Great Lent, has tainted the Russian language, just as it has the Russian Orthodox Church, whose head blessed the invasion. I haven't picked up a Russian book in seven weeks. Nor did I buy egg decoration kits for the Russian Easter last Sunday.

Then there's what I was taught to view as "Russian character"—my character. Teachers, movies, plays and textbooks told me that wars of aggression were the lot of other nations; that the very purpose of our existence was to heroically defend the Motherland. We were the nation of "Peace to the World" (a giant sign next to my house in the U.S.S.R.), of "Ask those soldiers lying under the birch trees if Russians want war" (a line from a song we learned in school).

But Vladimir Putin has hijacked the real suffering that World War II brought to the U.S.S.R. and used it to feed the cult of Russian victory. For years, his propaganda machine stoked aggression under the guise of celebrating heroism. But how can Russia be a nation of heroes if it kills and tortures its neighbors? As bombs pummel Ukrainian cities, the Russian part of my Russian American identity is slowly dying.

I held hope during the first days of war that at last Putin had gone too far. The Russian people would rise up, sweeping away the regime that deceives them, abuses them, steals their children's future. Russia would "wake up from its slumber," as Pushkin would put it, and do away with "oppressive reign"—with a popular movement to stop the death and destruction, cracking open the door to redemption.

Two months in, the war shows no signs of abating. Thousands are dead, mutilated, brutalized. The hope for revolution is gone. The nation of Chekhov and Dostoyevsky has failed to stop the atrocities waged in its name. Plenty of Russians oppose the war, but whether deceived by propaganda or frightened by the ever-worsening repression in their country, many have been cowed into outward support or even acceptance. "If there's no nuclear bombing," a relative in Moscow told me, "one can live."

Most of the Russian Americans I know are in a state of shock, disbelief—and guilt by association. As we follow the plight of our Ukrainian family and friends, it feels as though we're sleepwalking. It doesn't matter how strongly we have opposed Putin's regime or how long ago we left. We know that there's no return to our pre-war selves: Our identities have to be rebuilt. I'm not sure who I will be when I start sifting through the rubble.

Hope, however, is a stubborn thing. From a picture-perfect California college town, my older daughter sends me her poem. "My heart beats," it starts, "at the same fluttering pace as one that breathes the fumes of evil in Kyiv, and breaks the same, across the vast Pacific." My younger daughter, a high schooler, records a Ukrainian folk song and asks me to send it to my colleague in Odesa as he shelters in the underground garage of his apartment building from Russian airstrikes.

My daughters, born an ocean away, take this tragedy as their tragedy. They think about the world deeply. They are against this awful war. And they insist that they are Russian.

Since Feb. 24, I have felt like the words "good" and "Russian" can scarcely coexist. But as my first-generation Russian American daughters pray for peace and fundraise for Ukraine, I can envision a different Russian identity: humbler, freer and with a stronger sense of collective responsibility. First, we must end this war.

GCEA thanks the community for making the Marianas a better place to live

On April 21, the Governor's Council of Economic Advisers announced the winners of the Marianas Village Pride Campaign that launched in late 2021. Last week, the council also recognized the Top 15 Public Private Partnership partners of 2021. In both experiences, we were humbled by the sense of community that had developed throughout the campaign.

When the council launched the Marianas Village Pride Campaign, they set out to spark pride in the villages and schools. GCEA's mission is to improve the quality of life in the Marianas, and the MVP Campaign focused on improving the quality of life at the village level. Instead, we were inspired by their hard work and creativity.

COUNCIL OF
ADVISERS

Adopt-A-Median partners

When we launched the Adopt-A-Median program, we weren't expecting an influx of inquiries. The AAM program became the shining star of our 2021 PPP projects. Now when our residents take a drive around the island, they can see a noticeable improvement in the tidiness and visibility of our curbs, sidewalks, and crosswalks.

Schools throughout the Marianas joined in and adopted sidewalks and curbs around their campuses to improve overall safety and visibility. We will continue the Adopt-A-Median program throughout 2022, and our goal is to refresh every median on Rota, Tinian, and Saipan. We were humbled by the sense of community that had developed throughout the campaign. GCEA thanks all AAM partners for their support and welcomes new partners to join this year-round program.

PPP's success

To date, the PPP program has improved 82 sites in 26 villages with the direct support of 77 valuable PPP partners—66 on Saipan, six on Rota, and five on Tinian. Our partners completed transformation and beautification projects at 21 basketball courts, 20 beaches, parks and community facilities, 11 tourist sites, and five sports facilities. In its first year, our community on, both felonies.

Cops said the 9 mm semi-automatic handgun used in the shooting was built from parts easily accessible on the internet.

A ghost gun—otherwise known as a gun—is just as deadly as any weapon that comes off an assembly line. But they're even more problematic because they're unlicensed, have no serial numbers, and it's very difficult for police to trace them.

"Ghost guns are worse because they are operating outside the law," said U.S. Rep. Ritchie Torres, D-N.Y., who is sponsoring legislation in Congress aimed at companies exploiting the loophole. "You cannot buy a normal gun online without a serial number and a background check. There's been a gargantuan growth in the number of ghost guns."

This month, President Joe Biden announced his administration is enacting a regulation that will require serial numbers on ghost gun parts, and background checks for ghost gun kit buyers. The rule will designate ghost gun kits as firearms under federal law.

But Torres said that is not enough, because the next administration can just change the rule and reopen the loophole.

I told Torres about the bike I built as a kid, and he asked me how long it took to put together. I told him it took me a few weeks, including the time it took to gather the parts.

Ghost guns, he said, are as easy to assemble as LEGOs. Gun-makers can use 3D printers to manufacture plastic or polymer

It's not just LEGOs and bikes. Kids are assembling guns these days

I was 14 when I got my first 10-speed bike. My mom got it for me for Christmas.

Four months later, the bike was stolen inside a Brooklyn drug store where I had gone to pick up a prescription for a friend.

My mom was devastated for me, but not enough to replace the bike. I had to do that on my own.

With no job and no money I built my own bike with spare and donated parts, including an Italian racing frame from the friend for whom I had gotten the prescription.

It was orange. Other than that, it was the best bike ever, faster and lighter than the one my mother bought.

I think about that bike sometimes when I consider the creative juices of some teenagers today. They are just as motivated, if not more.

Only, now they're building guns.

When a teenage girl, Angellyh Yambo, was killed in the Bronx earlier this month, the stray bullet came from a gun that somebody put together.

Cops said Jeremiah Ryan, 17, was wielding a "ghost gun" when he unloaded a half-dozen bullets from a half-block away from Angellyh, near University Heights High School's South Bronx Campus.

Two other teens were wounded in the shooting.

In January, police said 16-year-old Julian Oliveros was shot by another teenager with a ghost gun in New Rochelle.

Tommy Rivera, 16, was charged with second-degree murder and two counts of second-degree criminal possession of a weap-parts in about 12 hours from blueprints that can be easily downloaded online.

"Any kid anywhere can buy gun components online without a background check and put those components into a fully functional firearm," Torres said. "I never thought I would live in a world where guns can be printed or guns can be manufactured at home. It's as surreal as it is shocking."

My rebuilt orange bike got me through most of my adolescence, to football practice after school to church choir rehearsal on the weekends. It carried me to nearly every corner of Brooklyn, and parts of Queens and Manhattan.

What I didn't tell Ritchie was that the rebuilt bike was eventually stolen, too. It was another adolescent setback, but at least it didn't involve a dangerous weapon that fell into the wrong hands.

US playing politics with migrant lives

By ARI SAWYER and CLARA LONG

PROGRESSIVE PERSPECTIVES

The Trump administration's three-year campaign to block access to asylum seekers at the U.S.-Mexico border led to its use of a scorched-earth tactic at the start of the coronavirus pandemic — border expulsions under orders from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The CDC has finally terminated its expulsion order known as Title 42, effective in May, after which the Biden administration can resume asylum processing. This has prompted shameful politicking to maintain the border closure, including by prominent members of the president's own party.

On April 25, a federal judge temporarily blocked the Biden administration from ending Title 42. But even before that happened, there was talk that the repeal would be delayed. Several Democratic senators have signed onto a bill to keep the measure in place.

In this critical moment, the administration should clearly refine and defend its plans to restore access to asylum and vigorously oppose any legislative efforts to maintain the expulsions.

Expulsions make the border less safe, particularly for those who make repeated dangerous attempts to cross. Each time, migrants and asylum seekers are often increasingly exhausted, dehydrated, and sick. Once expelled, they have been met with cruelty and targeted violence in northern Mexico, remote areas of the jungle in Central America, or their countries of origin. This includes Haiti, where the government has lost control over strategic areas to the hands of dangerous armed gangs, leaving expelled people unprotected.

Each day that the Biden administration continues unlawful expulsions is another day it is enforcing racist immigration policies. In recent weeks, Black, brown and Indigenous asylum seekers have watched white Ukrainians exempted from expulsion, a policy that should apply to all fleeing violence, conflict or persecution.

In northern Mexico, I recently spoke with a young asylum seeker who pulled down her mask to show a long scar on her face from being slashed in a knife attack in her home country of Honduras. She said she was targeted for being a lesbian and, while traveling to the United States, kidnapped for ransom near the border, beaten and forced to take off all her clothes as her captors photographed her.

When the woman pleaded with U.S. border officials not to send her to either Honduras or Mexico, she said agents laughed at her, and one said, "I don't care what's happening to you." Then, without screening to see if she faced persecution or torture, as is required by law, they expelled her to Honduras, where she faced death threats from gangs. She has since fled again and is hiding out near the border in hopes that the Biden administration will stay true to its word and restore asylum.

The U.S. public supports a well-managed border in which there is an orderly and safe process for those seeking asylum. The Biden administration should be saying more about how it will move toward a more fair and dignified system that protects families, children, adults and vulnerable groups including LG-BTQ+ people from harm.

Six missing mariners are rescued near Chuuk State

SANTARITA, Guam—Five adults and one child were rescued Tuesday aboard a missing vessel near Etal Atoll in Chuuk State in the Federated States of Micronesia. The U.S. Coast Guard and partner agencies led the rescue mission.

At 6am, Saturday, Coast Guard Forces Micronesia | Sector Guam watchstanders received a report of an overdue 19-foot vessel with six passengers on board. The vessel had left Namoluk Atoll the previous day for a 35-mile transit, but failed to arrive as planned in Etal Atoll in Chuuk State, FSM.

Upon notification, watchstanders deployed multiple Coast Guard assets to search the area while also coordinating with local and federal partners.

"The Sector Guam Command Center did an excellent job communicating with interagency and international partners to put limited resources in the right location and at the right time, which is very difficult in these remote locations," said Capt. Nicholas Simmons, the commander of Coast Guard Forces Micronesia | Sector Guam.

After a combined search effort of 9,521 miles, the crew of the merchant vessel Navigator located the missing vessel early Wednesday morning with all six people onboard. The missing vessel was located approximately 14 miles from its destination after they had run out of fuel in the midst of stormy weather.

The Navigator crew was able to provide fuel for the boat and all six passengers arrived safely in Etal. The Navigator is part of the Automated Mutual-Assistance Vessel Rescue program composed of volunteers from around the world who provide additional assistance during search and rescue operations.

Involved in the search: were USCG Forces Micronesia | Sector Guam's Joint Rescue Sub-Center; an Air

Station Barbers Point C-130 Hercules aircrew; the Coast Guard cutter Oliver Henry; an Air Force KC-10 Extender aircrew; the merchant vessel North Star crew; the merchant vessel Navigator crew. (USCG)

Just in time for the return of the Flame Tree Arts Festival, Heavenly Bites is cooking up a special treat this weekend with new bento meals like pork lechon belly and shawarma with fries.

The owner of the food stall at Sugar King Park, Lherie Galvan, said that adding the pork lechon belly and shawarma with fries bentos to their menu is perfect timing because the Flame Tree Arts Festival is returning after a two-year absence.

It's great that organizers chose Sugar King Park to host the event, she said, saying it will surely boost the sales of entrepreneurs like her who have made the park's concessionaires stand their home.

Heavenly Bites opened in June 2021 after Glvan decided to go into the food business after losing her job in the hospitality industry due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

April is National Welding Month

By LEIGH GASES

When you watch the opening ceremony for the 2022 Pacific Mini Games on Saipan this June, keep an eye on the oversized latte stone-shaped cauldron that will be lit on fire to signal the start of the games. That cauldron was welded by the Welding Class of the Northern Marianas Technical Institute, under the supervision of NMTEch welding instructor Eduardo Taruc.

This highlights the importance of welding and the skills needed to learn this trade, said Ben Babauta, who is the marketing coordinator of NMTEch.

Incidentally, April is also National Welding Month, Babauta said, and they are closing out the month by raising public awareness about welding, which is one of the courses that NMTEch offers. He said the welding course teaches the basics, including reading, planning, measuring, and cutting, as well as working with different materials such as steel, metal, carbon, and plasma arc.

Babauta said that NMTEch is proud to have such a skill in-house and teach it to those willing to learn in the community. "Over several months of hands-on learning could make you a skilled worker," he said.

European leaders blast cutoff of Russian gas as 'blackmail'

POKROVSK, Ukraine (AP)—European leaders blasted Russia's decision to cut natural gas shipments to Poland and Bulgaria as "blackmail," saying the cutoff and the Kremlin's warning that it might cease shipments to other countries is a failed attempt to divide the West over its support for Ukraine.

Russia's move Wednesday to use its most essential export as leverage marked a dramatic escalation in the economic war of sanctions and counter-sanctions that has unfolded in parallel to the fighting on the battlefield.

The tactic against the two EU and NATO members could eventually force targeted nations to ration gas and deal another blow to economies suffering from rising prices. At the same time, it could deprive Russia of badly needed income to fund its war effort.

Poland has been a major gateway for the delivery of weapons to Ukraine and confirmed this week that it is sending the country tanks. Just hours before Russia's state energy giant Gazprom acted, Poland announced a new set of sanctions against the company and other Russian businesses and oligarchs.

Bulgaria, under a new liberal government that took office last fall, has cut many of its old ties to Moscow and likewise supported punitive measures against the Kremlin. It has also hosted Western fighter jets at a new NATO outpost on Bulgaria's Black Sea coast.

The gas cuts do not immediately put the two countries in any dire trouble. Poland, especially, has been working for many years to line up other suppliers, and the continent is heading into summer, making gas less essential for households.

Also, Russian gas deliveries to both Poland and Bulgaria were expected to end later this year anyway.

Still, the cutoff and the Kremlin warning that other countries could be next sent shivers of worry through the 27-nation European Union. Germany, the largest economy on the continent, and Italy are among Europe's biggest consumers of Russian natural gas, though they, too, have been taking steps to reduce their dependence on Moscow.

"It comes as no surprise that the Kremlin uses fossil fuels to try to blackmail us," said EU Commission President Ursula von der Leyen. "Today, the Kremlin failed once again in his attempt to sow division amongst member states. The era of Russian fossil fuel in Europe is coming to an end."

Gazprom said it shut off the two countries because they refused to pay in rubles, as President Vladimir Putin has demanded of "unfriendly" nations. The Kremlin said other countries may be cut off if they don't agree to the payment arrangement.

Most European countries have publicly balked at Russia's demand for rubles, but it is not clear how many have actually faced the moment of decision so far. Greece's next scheduled payment to Gazprom is due on May 25, for example, and the government must decide then whether to comply.

Russia releases US Marine vet in surprise prisoner exchange

WASHINGTON (AP)—Russia and the United States have carried out an unexpected prisoner exchange in a time of high tensions, trading on Wednesday a Marine veteran jailed by Moscow for a convicted Russian drug trafficker serving a long prison sentence in America.

The deal involving Trevor Reed, an American imprisoned for nearly three years, would have been a notable diplomatic maneuver even in times of peace but it was all the more surprising because it was done as Russia's war with Ukraine has driven relations with the U.S. to their lowest point in decades.

On the other end of the swap was Konstantin Yaroshenko, a Russian pilot who'd been serving a 20-year federal sentence for conspiring to smuggle cocaine into the U.S.

Even as the Biden administration trumpeted the swap, it made clear the resolution did not herald a broader breakthrough between the countries. Russian forces remain determined in their assault on Ukraine, the U.S. and Western allies continue to impose punishing sanctions and other Americans, including WNBA star Brittney Griner and Michigan corporate security executive Paul Whelan, still remain jailed in Russia.

The swap, the culmination of longstanding requests by both countries as well as private diplomatic wrangling, took place in Turkey when "the two planes pulled up side by side, essentially, and then they got out," said Reed's father, Joey.

"I think it's going to really hit home for him and for us when we finally get to see him and touch him," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Reed, a 30-year-old former Marine from Texas, was arrested in the summer of 2019 after Russian authorities said he assaulted an officer while being driven by police to a police station following a night of heavy drinking. He was later sentenced to nine years in prison, though the U.S. government has described him as unjustly detained and pressed for his release while his family has asserted his innocence and expressed concerns about his deteriorating health—which included coughing up blood and a hunger strike.

Even on Wednesday, his parents' joy was mitigated by the concern they said they felt about his physical appearance. They were struck by his unsteady gait and how thin he looked as TV footage captured him walking, flanked by guards, from a van to the jet.

AS GANGS BATTLE IN HAITI
20 dead, thousands flee homes

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—Criminal violence in Haiti worsened this week, with fighting among gangs in part of the capital chasing thousands from their homes and killing at least 20 people, including children.

Haiti's Civil Protection Agency said the fighting began Sunday in four neighborhoods in Port-au-Prince, north of the international airport. At least a dozen homes were burned down and many of those who fled initially took shelter in the yard of a local mayor's office.

The eruption comes amid a spike in violence and kidnappings as gangs grow more powerful and seek to control more territory amid the power vacuum following the July 7 assassination of President Jovenel Moïse.

The situation has angered and frustrated Haitians, who are demanding action from Prime Minister Ariel Henry's administration, which is receiving international help to boost an underfunded and understaffed police force.

Israel halts for Holocaust day, honors 6 million Jews killed

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)—Sirens blared across Israel early Thursday as the country came to a standstill in an annual ritual honoring the 6 million Jews murdered during the Holocaust. People halted where they were walking, and drivers stopped their cars to get out of the vehicles as people bowed their heads in memory of the victims of the Nazi genocide. Ceremonies were planned throughout the day at Israel's national Holocaust memorial, parliament and elsewhere. Israel was founded in 1948 as a sanctuary for Jews in the wake of the Holocaust. About 165,000 survivors live in Israel, a dwindling population that is widely honored but struggling with poverty. Ushering in Holocaust memorial day at Yad Vashem, Israel's memorial, Prime Minister Naftali Bennett late Wednesday called on the world to stop comparing the Holocaust to other events in history. He spoke after the presidents of both Ukraine and Russia drew parallels between their ongoing war and the genocide during World War II.

Police: Woman helped plan kidnapping of baby in California

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP)—A woman arrested in the kidnapping of a 3-month-old baby from his San Francisco Bay Area home is a friend of the family and was present when a man abducted the baby while his grandmother unloaded groceries, police said Wednesday. Yesenia Ramirez, 43, had driven the child and his grandmother on a shopping trip and had been communicating with Jose Portillo before he entered the second floor San Jose apartment and took the baby Monday, San Jose Police Sgt. Christian Camarillo said. A motive for the kidnapping is still under investigation, Camarillo said. Portillo, 28, was captured on surveillance video carrying a baby car seat and a small blanket and walking toward the apartment, he said. "It was a clear indication that this was planned, premeditated," Camarillo said. Little Brandon Cuellar was found unharmed Tuesday inside a home where Portillo lived after detectives located a van they believed had been used in the kidnapping.

4 fatally shot in Mississippi; possible suspect found dead

possible suspect in the fatal shooting of the owner and two employees of a Mississippi Gulf Coast motel and subsequent death of a person shot during carjacking was found dead after a standoff with police Wednesday, authorities said.

Harrison County Coroner Brian Switzer identified the possible suspect as 32-year-old Jeremy Alesunder Reynolds. Gulfport Police Department's incoming chief, Adam Cooper, said Reynolds holed up at a Gulfport convenience store after fleeing from a stolen vehicle. Gulfport is just west of Biloxi, where the shootings took place at the Broadway Inn Express motel. Switzer told news outlets that motel owner Mohammad Moeini, 51; Laura Lehman, 61; and Chad Green, 55, were killed at the motel. Lehman and Green both lived and worked at the motel. WLOX-TV reported that one witness described a chaotic scene at the motel, with people fleeing.

Police said that after the motel shootings, another man was shot during a carjacking in Gulfport, and he later died in surgery. Switzer identified him as William Waltman, 52.

More Beijing classes go online in tightening of virus rules

BEIJING (AP)—Beijing shifted more classes online Thursday in a further tightening of COVID-19 restrictions, as China's capital seeks to prevent a wider outbreak. The city of 21 million has already ordered three rounds of mass testing this week for the virus, with the third due to take place on Friday, and closed down some communities where cases were found. On Thursday, it moved most students in the sprawling Chaoyang district to online learning, with exceptions for middle and high school students who are preparing to take crucial exams that could determine their academic futures. Beijing announced 50 new cases on Thursday, two of them asymptomatic, bringing its total in the latest wave of infections to around 150. Students make up more than 30% of total cases, with clusters linked to six schools and two kindergartens in Chaoyang. At least three other districts had already moved students online, and officials on Thursday announced rules requiring residents to remain inside two housing compounds in Chaoyang where cases have been detected.

Man gets 2 years for using twin's ID for veterans benefits

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—A Florida man was sentenced Tuesday to two years in federal prison for using his twin brother's stolen identity to obtain tens of thousands of dollars in military veterans benefits.

Wayne Bowen, 64, was sentenced in Jacksonville federal court, according to court records. He pleaded guilty in January to aggravated identity theft. He must also pay $63,773 in restitution.

According to a plea agreement, Bowen used the name,

Social Security card and military discharge papers of his estranged twin brother in 2014 to apply for federally subsidized housing benefits intended for indigent military veterans. The program was administered by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Bowen admitted to federal agents that he had been using his brother's identity for years, prosecutors said. Bowen had obtained a Florida identification card using his twin's identity. He initially told the agents that he and his twin had served in and been honorably discharged from the U.S. Army but later admitted that those were lies.

Based on Bowen's fraudulent use of his brother's identity, the VA provided him with $32,434 in medical services, HUD provided him with $18,905 in housing subsidies, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture funded $12,434 in nutritional benefits for him, officials said. Bowen's twin, who lives in another state, confirmed that he didn't apply for any of the benefits and that he never gave Bowen permission to use his name.

Florida bride, caterer served pot-laced food

LONGWOOD, Fla. (AP)—A 42-year-old Florida bride and her 31-year-old caterer are accused of serving food laced with marijuana to unsuspecting guests at a wedding reception.

The women were arrested Monday following an investigation by the Seminole County Sheriff's Office, according to court records. Both women were charged with tampering, culpable negligence, and delivery of marijuana and later bonded out of jail.

Investigators said in an arrest affidavit that guests began feeling ill during the Feb. 19 event at a clubhouse in Longwood, which is near Orlando. The report says 30 to 40 people attended the event.

Several people who said they felt "stoned" were taken to the hospital for treatment. The arrest report says several tested positive for THC, the psychoactive compound in marijuana.

A detective wrote in the report that guests said they had not been warned about the laced food. One man told deputies he was having a hard time operating his cellphone. Others said they felt paranoid and high.

Another guest told deputies that after feeling stoned, she asked the bride if cannabis was in the food and was told "yes" by the smiling bride, an affidavit said.

Police: Florida woman threatened to bomb hungry son's school

COCOA, Fla. (AP)—A woman has been arrested months after threatening to blow up her son's high school unless cafeteria workers started giving him more food, officials said. The threat was left Feb. 3 in a voicemail to Cocoa High School on Florida's Atlantic Coast, according to police and court records. The 41-year-old woman was arrested on Wednesday and charged with making a false bomb threat and disruption of a school. She did not leave her name on the voicemail, but the school's caller ID recorded the number, an arrest report said. Staff members at the school listened to the message the next morning and contacted Cocoa police. The school was evacuated, but no weapons or explosive devices were found. Investigators located the woman's phone number in school records and a resource officer confirmed that her child had gotten into an argument Feb. 3 with a cafeteria worker because he wanted more food. The state attorney's office filed paperwork ordering the woman's arrest on April 7. Officials arrested her Wednesday.

Woman rescued after falling in toilet trying to get phone

QUILCENE, Wash. (AP)—A woman who accidentally dropped her cellphone into the hole of an outhouse in a national forest and fell in while trying to retrieve it had to be rescued by firefighters in Washington state. Brinnon Fire Department Chief Tim Manly said the woman, who was at the top of Mount Walker in the Olympic National Forest northwest of Seattle, had been using her phone when it fell into the toilet on Tuesday, The Kitsap Sun reported. Manly said she disassembled the toilet seat and used dog leashes to try and get the phone and eventually used the leashes to tie herself off as she reached for it. That effort failed and she fell into the toilet headfirst. "They didn't work very well and in she went," Manly said. The woman was alone and tried to get out for 10 to 15 minutes. Reunited with her phone, she called 911, Manly said. Responding firefighters passed her blocks to stand on to reach a harness, which they used to pull her out of the vault. The Brinnon Fire Department said the woman said she was uninjured. She was washed down and "strongly encouraged to seek medical attention after being exposed to human waste, but she only wanted to leave," the department said. "I've been doing this for 40 years, and that was a first," Manly said.

Oklahoma panel says candidate can't be called 'The Patriot'

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—A Republican lawmaker who wanted to refer to himself as "The Patriot" on the ballot can't use that nickname, the Oklahoma Election Board has ruled. The board decided Monday that term-limited state Rep. Sean Roberts can still run for Oklahoma Labor Commissioner, but he can't refer to himself by that nickname on the ballot. Oklahoma election rules allow a candidate to use a nickname if it's a name the candidate is generally known by or who does business using the nickname. Roberts' opponent, Republican Labor Commissioner Leslie Osborn, said there's no evidence Roberts is known as "The Patriot." She pointed out in her petition to the board that Roberts has appeared on the ballot in seven successive elections as Kevin Sean Roberts or Sean Roberts. Roberts said in a statement he's considering appealing the board's decision. Also on Monday, the board rejected a petition by Democratic U.S. Senate candidate Jason Bollinger to have his Democratic opponent, Madison Horn, removed from the ballot. Bollinger alleged Horn's candidacy declaration was incomplete. The two are seeking the Democratic nomination in the U.S. Senate race for the seat currently held by Republican U.S. Sen. James Lankford.

Officers: No injuries on Amber Heard after fight with Depp

FALLS CHURCH, Va. (AP)—May 27, 2016, was the day that Johnny Depp and Amber Heard's marriage went from private misery to public, career-killing spectacle.

Heard, who had just filed for divorce, arrived at a Los Angeles courthouse that day to seek a temporary restraining order, showing up with a clear mark on her face, which she said Depp inflicted during a fight six days prior. Photographers captured the scene, and the allegations became tabloid fodder across the globe.

Depp says he never hit her, and now he's suing Heard for libel in Fairfax County Circuit Court. On Wednesday, jurors in the case heard from police officers who responded to the couple's penthouse immediately after the fight. None of the officers saw the red mark that was so prominent six days later.

Officer Tyler Hadden, one of the officers who responded to the couple's penthouse apartment on May 21, 2016, said Heard refused to talk to officers and had no signs of an injury, although he acknowledged she'd been crying and was red-faced.

"Just because I see a fe-

Heard

male with pink cheeks and pink eyes doesn't mean something happened," he said in a recorded deposition played for jurors Wednesday.

Depp had already left the penthouse by the time officers arrived. Officers said they that she was married to Depp. He said neither Heard nor anyone at the penthouse complex was willing to tell him or the other officers who Heard's husband was.

Jurors heard similar testimony Tuesday from an officer who accompanied Hadden to the penthouse.

An officer who made a follow-up visit that night, William Gatlin, testified Wednesday that he saw no injuries either, though he acknowledged that his visit was brief and he got no closer than 10 feet (3 meters) from Heard. He said his check was a perfunctory one because it appeared that the call was just a duplicate to the one that Hadden had already responded to.

The jury saw bodycam video of Gatlin's response, which was less than two minutes. Heard could only be seen at a distance.

Lost for decades, Dorothy's dress from 'Oz' up for sale

NEW YORK (AP)—It's one of the most recognizable outfits in American movie history, the blue-and-white checked gingham dress a young Judy Garland wore as Dorothy in the classic 1939 movie "The Wizard of Oz."

For decades, one of the versions of the dress Garland wore in the movie was assumed lost at Catholic University of America, where it had been given to someone in the drama department in the early 1970s. But the clearing out of some office clutter last year led to the finding of the dress in an old shoebox, and now it's headed for the auction block.

When she first saw it, "all I could think about was watching the movie when I was a child and growing up with" it, said Jacqueline Leary-Warsaw, dean of the school of music, drama and art at Catholic University, in Washington, D.C. "In a way it was like I was looking at my past childhood."

She and others are hopeful that nostalgia factor will come into play when the costume goes up for sale at Bonhams "Classic Hollywood: Film and Television" auction on May 24 in Los Angeles, where it has a presale estimate of $800,000 to $1.2 million. Bonhams has the dress on display this week at the auction house's New York location before it is sent to California for public view and then auction.

Helen Hall, director of popular culture for Bonhams, said that the market for memorabilia, and film costumes in particular, is strong, and that "The Wizard of Oz" is a cultural touchstone.

Helen Mirren graces cover of People's 'Beautiful Issue'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Helen Mirren graces People magazine's "The Beautiful Issue" in a cover story that touches on her thoughts of beauty and how the Oscar winner still gets nervous before filming a role.

The magazine on Wednesday revealed the cover of the annual issue, which hits newsstands Friday.

The 76-year-old Mirren said she was "gobstruck" after learning about her honor and never considered herself beautiful — especially at her age. From her perspective, the word beauty should be dubbed another word: swagger.

"I love the word swagger because I think swagger means I'm confident in myself, I'm presenting myself to the world, I'm enjoying the world around me," said Mirren, who won an Academy Award for best actress for her role in the 2006 film "The Queen." The actor, who has been a L'Oréal Paris spokesperson since 2014, has built an impressive acting career with more than 140 credits in 55 years.

"I think what is called the beauty industry should be called the swagger industry," she continued. "We're giving people swagger."

Despite her revered career, she still finds herself nervous before starting a new project.

"I get very nervous about the day-to-day process," said Mirren, who starred in films including "The Long Good Friday," "Elizabeth I" and "The Cook, the Thief, His Wife, & Her Lover." "And meeting and dealing with new people. And not knowing whether I am going to remember my lines or not. I just get very frightened until I get into the swing of things and then I kind of relax."

After a film wraps, Mirren said her nerves are calmed and she doesn't read any reviews—good or bad.

While Mirren is hesitant to call herself beautiful, Vin Diesel believes the word perfectly suits her.

Rob Kardashian says that Blac Chyna put a gun to his head

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Rob Kardashian testified Wednesday that he feared for his life on a night in 2016 when his then-fiancée Blac Chyna pointed a gun at his head, pulled a phone-charging cable around his neck and repeatedly hit him with a metal rod while under the influence of substances.

"She strangled me, she put a gun to my head twice, she was on cocaine and alcohol," Kardashian said, his voice rising nearly to a shout in a Los Angeles courtroom as Chyna's attorney Lynne Ciani sought to cast doubt on the attack and its severity.

Chyna is suing Rob Kardashian's mother Kris Jenner and sisters Kim Kardashian, Khloe Kardashian and Kylie Jenner, alleging they spread false reports of her assaulting him in order to have her "Keeping Up With the Kardashians" spinoff "Rob & Chyna" canceled and ruin her reality TV career.

In-laws offer sweet deal for home...with a catch

DEAR ABBY: I am a newlywed. My husband and I are looking for a house to settle down in, but we're struggling to find one we like that we can afford. My in-laws, who are moving, offered to sell us their house for a very generous price. The house is in a great neighborhood, but it's old and outdated and has HVAC and plumbing problems.

I think the house would be the perfect place for my husband and me to raise a family if we had some renovations made. However, we have talked to my in-laws about this, and they are very attached to this house and very against having any renovations made to it. My husband is happy to buy it and not have the renovations made, but I'm not so sure. What should I do?

HOUSE HUNTER IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR HOUSE HUNTER: You and your husband should talk with your in-laws together. While I understand their sentimental attachment to the house, they are being unrealistic and controlling. If they were to sell it to strangers, you can bet the first thing that would happen would be renovations. HVAC, plumbing, electrical and roof problems cost a fortune to keep fixing over time if they are not dealt with. Don't they want their grandchildren raised in a nice, safe home in a great neighborhood? If the answer is yes, they need to loosen the reins. If not, then you should keep looking.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a veteran with a nonservice-connected back injury. I need artificial discs between several vertebrae. The hospitals and clinics ignored my condition for the past 25 years. I will have an MRI soon. My fiancée is a nurse and does not have the money for the operation I need. A wealthy female friend has offered to fund it. Should I ask my fiancée for permission since this friend is a woman?

GETTING A CHANCE IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR GETTING: You should definitely clear it with your fiancée. If she loves you, she will agree that you are fortunate to have such a generous friend. However, if she's insecure, you will then have to decide which is more important—your health or your relationship. I know which one I'd choose.

MOM WITH A PLAN

DEAR MOM: Quit being a helicopter barista. Have enough respect for your college-age daughter to tell her the amount of coffee she consumes is a concern for you. Then ask if she would like your help to cut back. CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let experience guide you to bigger and better opportunities. Refuse to let someone's emotional restraint stop you from embracing the changes that offer the type of lifestyle you want to live. Trust your instincts. **

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may not like how others respond, but regardless, your decisions and actions should reflect what's in your heart. Don't let anger lead to regret; follow through with your commitments instead of allowing someone to coerce you into a debate. ****

Curry, Warriors hold off Jokic, eliminate Nuggets in Game 5

SAN FRANCISCO

(AP)—Back in the starting lineup at last, Stephen Curry took over late and brought his team back just as he has so many times during Golden State's deep postseason runs.

Curry scored 30 points in his return to the starting five and the Warriors beat Nikola Jokic and the Denver Nuggets 102-98 on Wednesday night to end their first-round series in five games.

Curry scored 11 points during the fourth quarter after the Warriors began the final 12 minutes down by eight. The two-time MVP converted a three-point play with 1:33 left and scored again with 29 seconds remaining to help send the Warriors on to the second round in the Western Conference.

"I was a witness, letting him cook, create plays for him. Try to get him open looks and after that, you know what he does," Warriors guard Gary Payton II said.

Jokic scored 12 of his 30 points in the final 3:46 and finished with 19 rebounds and eight assists.

The Warriors—thriving with the support from their raucous home crowd in their first close-out playoff game at Chase Center—advanced to play the winner of the Memphis-Minnesota series led 3-2 by the Grizzlies heading into Game 6 on Friday in Minneapolis. The Grizzlies eliminated Golden State in the play-in round last year.

Jokic tied it at 90 on an 18-footer with 2:26 remaining before Payton made a layup moments later. Payton also hit a go-ahead 3-pointer from the corner in front of Denver's bench with 6:57 left to put Golden State up 86-84. He finished with 15 points.

"He was incredible, both ends of the floor, big shots, big plays," teammate Draymond Green said.

Payton found his dad, Gary Payton, after the final buzzer just for a quick hello.

Jokic converted two free throws with 3:46 left after Green's foul the Golden State defensive star wanted called on the 7-footer. Jokic wound up 12 for 18 from the floor. DeMarcus Cousins contributed 19 points off the bench against his former Golden State team, and Aaron Gordon added 15 points and nine rebounds.

Denver made seven of its first 10 shots after halftime to turn a 48-all tie into a 66-56 lead. Curry's 3 with 4:06 left pulled the Warriors to 68-67.

Curry shot 10 of 22 with five 3-pointers. He came off the bench in the first four games, with the series beginning one month from when he Golden State Warriors guard Stephen Curry (30) is congratulated by Draymond Green (23) during a timeout in the first half of Game 5 of the team's NBA basketball first-round playoff series against the Denver Nuggets in San Francisco, Wednesday, April 27, 2022.

Golden State coach Steve Kerr went small with Curry, Jordan Poole and Klay Thompson, as Kevon Looney came off the bench. Thompson had 15 points and nine rebounds.

Kerr challenged the Warriors to "get back to being us." They had given up 30 points off 15 turnovers and committed 27 fouls that led to 36 free throws for Denver in a 126-121 road loss Sunday.

Bucks 116, Bulls 100

In Milwaukee, the defending NBA champion Milwaukee Bucks continue to produce in the postseason even without key performers.

The Chicago Bulls simply don't have that kind of depth or playoff savvy.

Giannis Antetokounmpo had 33 points and nine rebounds and the Bucks routed the Bulls 116-100 on Wednesday night to finish off their first-round series in five games.

The Bucks won the last three games by an average of 23.3 points despite playing without Khris Middleton, the All-Star who sprained the medial collateral ligament in his left knee during the fourth quarter of Game 2.

The third-seeded Bucks advanced to face second-seeded Boston in the Eastern Conference semifinals, with Game 1 on Sunday in Boston. The Celtics swept Brooklyn.

"After Game 2, we kind of talked about how we know what the deal was," Antetokounmpo said. "The team knew what the deal was. We knew what we had to do. We had to be desperate. We had to go out there and compete at a high level, pay attention to detail as much as possible, help one another defensively. We've got to do it as a team."

The Bucks have been through this before. They won their first title since 1971 last season despite losing Antetokounmpo for the last two games of the Eastern Conference finals due to a hyperextended knee.

"We've been talking about the depth of the roster, the quality of the roster a lot this season," Bucks coach Mike Budenholzer said. "Other guys have gotten opportunities and played well. Our defense has tightened up, and we've leaned hard on that these three games. We've got depth. We've got a good group."

Antetokounmpo appeared to get his left wrist treated during the first half, but it clearly didn't limit his effectiveness. Antetokounmpo said afterward he felt "great," and Budenholzer added that "we think he's fine."

While the Bucks thrived without Middleton, Chicago didn't handle the loss of key players quite as well.

The Bulls played without the starting backcourt they used for the first four games because two-time All-Star Zach LaVine was in health and safety protocols and Alex Caruso was in concussion protocol. Without them on the floor, the Bulls fell behind by as many as 29 points in the first half.

"This was a lot of our guys' first rodeo, just understanding what it's like to compete in a playoff series," Chicago's DeMar DeRozan said. "There's so much you can learn from that experience, especially going against the defending champs."

Milwaukee focused on containing DeRozan, who had scored 41 points in the Bulls' Game 2 victory. DeRozan was held to 11 points Wednesday while shooting 5 of 10, though he also had seven assists.

"That was the game plan — make him see a lot of bodies and force everybody else to beat us," Bucks guard Wesley Matthews said.

Antetokounmpo was 1 of 15 from the floor and 11 of 14 from the free-throw line. Pat Connaughton went 6 of 9 on 3-point attempts and scored 20 points. Bobby Portis added 14 points and a career-high 17 rebounds.

Patrick Williams scored 23 points, Nikola Vucevic 19 and Coby White 17 for the Bulls. Vucevic also had 16 rebounds and six assists.

DeRozan was scoreless in the first 26 minutes of the game and attempted just one shot in the first quarter as he tried to get his teammates involved.

The problem was Chicago's other players weren't hitting open shots, allowing the Bucks to take command early.

"It was pretty obvious they were going to load up on DeMar," Bulls coach Billy Donovan said. "I thought he played a great game. I thought he generated good shots. He didn't have a high assist total because we really didn't shoot the ball particularly well, but he would have had an enormous amount of assists if we had shot the ball better."

Milwaukee pulled ahead for good 3 1/2 minutes into the game and built a double-digit lead by scoring 12 straight points in the first quarter. Late in the first period, the Bucks began a 23-2 run that helped them extend the advantage to 49-20 with 7:25 left in the second period.

Chicago outscored the Bucks 22-11 the rest of the second quarter and got the margin down to 11 on Ayo Dosunmu's 3-point play with 9:32 left in the third quarter, but that's as close as the Bulls would get.

Expected to be a force, Nets turned out to be a farce

NEW YORK (AP)—With Kevin Durant, Kyrie Irving and James Harden, the Brooklyn Nets had expectations of being the last team standing.

Instead, they were the first team sent packing.

Irving wasn't around to start the season. Harden was long gone before the end of it.

And after their flop culminated in a first-round sweep by the Boston Celtics, the Nets acknowledged that all their distractions off the court kept them from becoming a great team on it.

"We had our expectations. Everybody had expectations for us," Durant said. "A lot of stuff happened throughout the season that derailed us, but I'm proud of how we just kept fighting and kept keeping the faith and every day were trying to work towards something."

The Nets were thrown off course right from the start when Irving refused to get vaccinated against the coronavirus as mandated to play in New York City. The Nets initially kept him away from the team entirely until he could play in all their games, then brought him back in December to play only on the road after a COVID-19 outbreak left the team depleted.

Soon after, Harden began souring on Brooklyn. The Nets ended their Big Three experiment just 13 months after creating it when they traded him to Philadelphia in February for a package headlined by Ben Simmons.

Simmons never played for the Nets, a combination of back problems and mental health concerns ending hopes that he would suit up during the series against Boston.

It probably wouldn't have mattered, anyway. The Celtics were a cohesive unit that got better as the season went on. The Nets were an underachieving team unable to outplay their dysfunction.

"I think it was just really heavy emotionally, the season. We all felt it," Irving said. "I felt like I was letting the team down at a point, where I wasn't able to play. We were trying to exercise every option for me to play. But I never want it to just be about me and it became a distraction at times, and as you see we just had some drastic changes."

Irving wasn't cleared to play in home games until late March, after an exemption to the city mandate. By then, the Nets had to overwork Durant after he returned from a sprained knee ligament just so they could play their way into the No. 7 seed through the play-in tournament.

They finished 44-38 yet still were considered dangerous against the top teams because of Durant and Irving. They weren't, and only the ineptitude of the Los Angeles Lakers kept the Nets from claiming sole ownership of the most miserable season in the NBA.

And when it was finally over Monday, it had a feeling of goodbye and good riddance.

"I know so many people wanted to see us fail at this juncture, picked us as contenders and have so much to say at this point," Irving said. "So I'm just using that as fuel for this summer and coming into this season starting from October and just getting a good start as a team, and hopefully we won't run into any barriers and we can just start fresh."

Arenado ejected as Cardinals brawl with Mets in 10-5 victory

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The New York Mets' hit-by-pitch frustrations boiled over Wednesday when reliever Yoan López threw a pitch near Nolan Arenado's head, sparking a benches-clearing brawl that led to Arenado's ejection in the St. Louis Cardinals' 10-5 victory.

Mets hitter J.D. Davis left in the top of the eighth inning after being hit in the left foot by a pitch from Génesis Cabrera, the major league-leading 19th hit-by-pitch for the Mets this season — including three Tuesday night against St. Louis.

New York appeared to retaliate a half-inning later against Arenado, who reached four times and drove in three runs. López zipped a 94 mph fast-ball near his head, and Arenado began yelling for López to "do it again." The benches and bullpens cleared, and the teams pushed and shoved near home plate.

Jake Woodford (1-0) allowed a run in two-plus innings of relief as St. Louis snapped a season-high three-game losing streak.

Mets starter Carlos Carrasco (1-1) gave up a season-high eight runs, seven earned, in a season-low 3 2/3 innings as the Mets had their three-game winning streak snapped.

Red Sox 7, Blue Jays 1

In Toronto, Xander Bogaerts had four hits and Boston celebrated the return of manager Alex Cora by snapping a four-game losing streak.

Cora rejoined the Red Sox after missing the past six games because of COVID-19. Boston went 1-5 under bench coach Will Venable while Cora was away.

Bogaerts went 4 for 4 with four singles and a walk. Michael Wacha (2-0) earned his second straight win, allowing one run and four hits in six innings.

Toronto reliever Trent Thornton (0-1) allowed two runs in one inning as the Blue Jays lost for the second time in eight games.

Angels 9, Guardians 5

In Anaheim, Calif., Taylor Ward hit a grand slam and finished a single shy of the cycle, Shohei Ohtani showed off his two-way prowess and Los Angeles romped past Cleveland for its fourth consecutive victory.

Mike Trout added two RBI doubles and extended his hitting streak to 10 games for the Angels.

The Guardians dropped their sixth straight despite a pair of two-run homers from José Ramírez.

Ward's slam off Zach Plesac (1-2) in the second inning was the third of his career and gave the Angels a 6-2 lead. The outfielder also had a leadoff double in the first and a triple in the sixth. He scored four times.

With a chance at the cycle in the seventh, Ward flied out to end the inning.

White Sox 7, Royals 3

In Chicago, Andrew Vaughn hit a tiebreaking three-run homer in the seventh inning, and the White Sox stopped an eight-game slide.

The winning rally for the White Sox started when Danny Mendick and Tim Anderson hit consecutive two-out singles off Collin Snider (2-1). Scott Barlow then came in, and Vaughn drove his first pitch into the home bullpen in left.

Cubs 6, Braves 3, 10 innings

In Atlanta, Willson Contreras hit a run-scoring double in the 10th inning, Patrick Wisdom followed with a two-run homer, and Chicago beat Atlanta.

Contreras lined his double to the left field wall off Tyler Matzek (0-1) to drive in automatic runner Ian Happ. After Frank Schwindel struck out, Wisdom launched a drive into the left-center seats for his third homer of the season.

Diamondbacks 3, Dodgers 1

In Phoenix, Zac Gallen pitched six scoreless innings, and the Diamondbacks scored two runs after Max Muncy's throwing error in the eighth inning.

Gallen allowed two hits and left with a 1-0 lead, but Ian Kennedy (2-1) gave up Trea Turner's run-scoring single in the eighth inning.

Arizona went back ahead in the bottom half, when Daulton Varsho scored from first base after Muncy threw the ball into right field on Sergio Alcántara's sacrifice bunt. Pinch-hitter Pavin Smith put the Diamondbacks up 3-1 with a groundout off Daniel Hudson (1-1).

Yankees 5, Orioles 2

In New York, Yankees slugger Giancarlo Stanton hit his 350th career homer and lifted a go-ahead sacrifice fly in the sixth inning.

Joey Gallo also homered for New York for the second straight night, his third straight game with an RBI after going his first 14 games without one.

Stanton is the seventh fastest player to 350 homers, getting there in 1,341 games.

Stanton's performance helped the Yankees win their fifth straight and seventh in eight games. Michael King (2-0) pitched 2 1/3 scoreless innings for New York, and Clay Holmes tossed a perfect ninth for his second career save.

Anthony Santander hit a two-run homer for the Orioles in the sixth. Joey Krehbiel (1-2) got the loss.

Athletics 1, Giants 0

In San Francisco, Paul Blackburn and five relievers combined on a three-hitter, making Chad Pinder's leadoff homer stand up as Oakland snapped San Francisco's five-game winning streak.

Blackburn (3-0) allowed three hits in five innings, lowering his ERA to 1.35. The right-hander induced three double-play grounders in the first three innings — including a difficult 3-6-1 turn to end the third after the Giants had loaded the bases.

Domingo Acevedo, Sam Moll, Zach Jackson and Kirby Sneed combined for three scoreless innings. Dany Jimenez pitched the ninth and got help from instant replay for his fourth save while helping the A's to their second shutout in three games.

Pinder came off the COVID-19 injured list before the game and celebrated by crushing the sixth pitch from opener Sam Long (0-1) into the left-field stands.

Phillies 7, Rockies 3

In Philadelphia, Bryce Harper had three hits and Odubel Herrera homered, leading the Phillies to their third straight win over the Rockies.

Herrera and Didi Gregorius each drove in two runs for Philadelphia, which has outscored Colorado 25-8 in the series. Ranger Suárez (2-0) pitched six innings of three-run ball for the win.

The Phillies earned their first series win since taking two of three from Oakland to open the season and will go for the four-game sweep on Thursday.

C.J. Cron homered and José Iglesias had four singles for the Rockies. Ryan Feltner (0-1) got the loss.

Marlins 2, Nationals 1

In Washington, Miami's Pablo López lowered his majors-best ERA to 0.39 by throwing six shutout innings.

Jesús Aguilar homered for the Marlins, who moved above .500 for the first time in 2022.

Mixing a four-seam fastball, cutter and changeup before an announced crowd of 13,356, López (3-0) baffled an already-in-trouble Nationals offense, which has managed to score a grand total of 14 runs during a losing streak that grew to seven games.

Washington's Erick Fedde (1-2) yielded two runs and three hits in 4 2/3 innings.

Rays 3, Mariners 2

In St. Petersburg, Fla., Drew Rasmussen struck out nine in six shutout innings, and Tampa Bay stopped Seattle's four-game winning streak.

Kevin Kiermaier hit a two-run homer for the Rays. Rasmussen (1-1) permitted two hits and walked one, and Andrew Kittredge got four outs for his third save in three tries.

Seattle starter Marco Gonzales (1-2) lasted just 11 pitches. He left after being struck on the left wrist by a line drive hit by Harold Ramirez. The hit drove in the first run of the game.

Brewers 3, Pirates 1

In Pittsburgh, Tyrone Taylor hit a tiebreaking RBI single in the seventh, leading the Brewers to the victory.

Milwaukee's Aaron Ashby combined with four relievers on a one-hitter. Ashby pitched 5 2/3 innings of one-run ball. Trevor Gott (1-0) earned the win, and Josh Hader worked the ninth for his 10th save.

Neither team got a hit until the sixth inning. Ashby's no-hit bid ended when Bryan Reynolds hit a hard shot that deflected off the glove of third baseman Mike Brosseau for a single. Kolten Wong had a one-out double in the top of the sixth off Bryse Wilson for the Brewers' first hit.

Padres 8, Reds 5

In Cincinnati, Jurickson Profar hit a three-run homer for San Diego, and MacKenzie Gore struck out 10 over five innings.

Gore (2-0) allowed a run and five hits as the Padres won for the seventh time in nine games. Eric Hosmer drove in two runs, including a leadoff homer in the eighth. Taylor Rogers got one out for his sixth save.

San Diego will go for its second sweep of the season Thursday of the hard-luck Reds, who have lost 12 of 13 amid a rash of injuries and slumps.

Reds starter Vladimir Gutierrez (0-4) went four innings and was charged with six runs and five hits.

Twins 5, Tigers 0

In Minneapolis, Joe Ryan threw seven innings of one-hit ball and Max Kepler stayed hot with a pair of home runs as the Twins won their sixth game in a row.

Ryan Jeffers homered, doubled and drove in three runs for Minnesota.

Michael Pineda (1-1) took the loss for Detroit. He gave up four runs, including all three Twins homers, in five innings against his former team.

Astros 4, Rangers 3

In Arlington, Texas, Kyle Tucker hit a three-run double in the fifth inning and Cristian Javier won his first start of the season as Houston beat Texas.

Javier (1-0) allowed two runs in five innings. He was promoted to the role of sixth starter thanks to 8 1/3 shutout innings in three relief appearances.

Tucker scorched an 82 mph curveball to the gap in left-center off reliever Brett Martin (0-2). The ball rolled all the way to the wall to clear the bases.

Ryne Stanek earned his first save since last August. He allowed a run in the ninth but left the potential tying run at third base.

The 38-year-old from Dandan was a picture of perfection during the April race of Marianas Racing Association after dominating both heats for 50 points. Rex Susulin came in second with 44 points after two runner-up finishes, while Henry Camacho Sr. totaled 40 points for third place.

"I wasn't really focusing on my race. I was more focused on my daughter's race as it was exciting and competitive. The impact we make on kids especially my daughter is important to me. When they ask questions or ask to teach them, that is what keeps me racing and for the fans to see an ATV flying in the air," he said.

Camacho's daughter is Kassidy Camacho and she competed in the Mini ATV Class, finishing third place.

Asked if he's already getting bored after winning his division for the fourth straight time, the elder Camacho answer was: "Well I wouldn't call it bored as I made it a goal to have a perfect season... I like to thank God first and foremost for the many blessings he's given us and keeping us safe. I like to thank my wife and kids, my parents and siblings, the fans, the MRA board, and the people who continue to make this possible."

In the Pee wee ATV Class, Keoni Rosario took the checkered flag after winning both heats as well for 50 points, while Rockson Cabrera and Angel Ray Camacho came in second and third with 44 points and 38 points, respectively.

Franchesca Yumul headline the winners in the Mini ATV Class with 47 points, followed by Anella Igitol in second with 40 points. Kassidy Camacho tied Igitol with 40 points but lost to Igitol in the second heat to settle for third.

In the Novice Class, Joseph Santos was again without peer and finished with 50 points after winning both races. Ethan Yumul was runner-up twice to come in second with 44 points. With 38 points and third place was Keonia Macaranas.

Corry Pangelinan may have to be elevated to Expert Class next season after topping the Hoops and Vibes Basketball tourney set next

The Precinct 5 Hoops and Vibes Basketball Tournament kicks off next month when players from across the CNMI descend upon the Kagman Community Center to "hoop it up" under the lights.

The co-ed youth basketball tournament takes place in Precinct 5 but registration is open to boys and girls throughout the CNMI between 14 and 18 years old. Each team must have at least seven players and have at least one female on the squad. Uniforms are not required but each team must wear the same-colored shirt with a number.

Registration is free and the deadline to register is this Friday, April 29 at 4:30pm. There will be a meeting for coaches and team captains at the Kagman Community Center next Monday, May 2 at 5:30pm. The opening ceremony kicks off at the Kagman Community Center court Friday, May 6 at 6pm followed by the first game at 6:30pm.

The three-week tournament is sponsored by Precinct 5 Reps. Leila Staffler (D-Saipan) and Richard Lizama (D-Saipan), and features games on May 6, 9, 11, 13, 16, 20, and wraps up with the championship Saturday, cruise control before DECM kicked off the monumental comeback.

Three-point specialist Rodney Catalla led MDC with 23 points, while Calbone and Sedillo added 21 and 16 markers, respectively. Baul paced all scorers with 30 points, while Tabora was held down to 21 points. Pangelinan added 14 points.

With the win, MDC will take on pennant winner Blue Haus in the 7pm second game of the Final Four tomorrow at the Gillette Multi-Purpose Center in Gualo Rai.

In the earlier game, Eagles Construction also sent Magalahi Eagles packing after a 69-58 victory. Both teams struggled to score all game long, but luckily for Eagles Construction the two Mikes—Umali and Surima—got hot at the right time in the second half to lead the team to the win and onto the semifinals against No. 2 NAPA Auto this Saturday starting at 6pm.

MDC

in the contest. After another fruitless possession by MDC, Tabora had a chance to give DECM an improbable lead but he was triple-teamed and his driving double-pump attempt was blocked. What followed was a parade of free throws by MDC and Fradel Sedillo, Richard Calbone, and Gerry Tolentino made just enough of them to preserve the win.

MDC got off to a jackrabbit start and led DECM, 22-14, in the first quarter as Sedillo humbled all defenders assigned to stop him. DECM would trim the deficit to 3 points, 41-44, at the half as it was Tabora's turn to heat up in the second quarter.

Both teams would engage in a nip-and-tuck affair in the third and as a result it was back to square 1 after three quarters at 67-all. MDC would spring to life at the start of the payoff period and seemingly was in May 21. Three games will be played per night, each with two 15-minute halves and one timeout per half for each team. The top teams will take home trophies, prizes and bragging rights!

For more information about the Hoopes and Vibes Basketball Tournament, to register your team, to volunteer as a referee or to register as a vendor, call Staffler's office at (670) 664-8892, via email at rep.staffler@gmail.com or visit bit.ly/P5Hoops. (PR) because it's a theft, it's a crime obviously pulling it out and stealing it from the games organizing committee," he said.

The games organizing committee CEO said at the end of the day, the CNMI must put its best foot forward as the best athletes not only in the region but in the world will be arriving in the CNMI for the Mini Games.

"Team Tahiti is coming, the No. 1 [va'a] team in the world, and at the end of the day our goal is to finish second," he half-jokingly said.

Northern Marianas National Paddle Sports Federation president Justin Andrew also appealed to the public to help them solve this crime.

"It was just yesterday that I was informed by those that are out there setting up our sprint lane that they discovered another anchor bolt missing. Please leave those items alone as they're critical for our va'a sports hosting. Without those anchors, the CNMI will not be able to host the va'a competition."

Aside from not being able to stage the outrigger competition, Andrew added that the loss of the anchor bolt will also prove somewhat detrimental to their training regimen.

"It will disrupt our training on the lanes since we will not have the buoys and flags to use. But we can still train, but for sure we will not be able to hold competition with missing anchors since there will also be missing buoys and flags."

CNMI National Outrigger Canoe member Jason Tarkong said everyone in the va'a community is disheartened by the latest development and asked the community to call Crime Stoppers if they have any information about the theft.

"It is sad that the anchors are being stolen. Depriving someone of their property without permission is a crime. Theft of the equipment and materials required to conduct the va'a competition in races is despairing. The NMI va'a sport athletes, volunteers, and administrative personnel are disappointed at the criminals who did this."

If you have any information on the stolen anchors contact, the CNMI Crime Stoppers tips line at 234-7272 (PARA) or *11 from any IT&E Cellular phone (Toll free from Tinian and Rota) to give your information. When you call the Crime Stoppers tips line, you do not need to give your name; we only want the information regarding a case. You can call Crime Stoppers if you have information on other illegal activities or crimes not listed on this page. Crime Stoppers will pay you up to $1,000 for information that leads to an arrest.

TSL Foundation supports Chamber's golf tourney

Tan Siu Lin Foundation continues to support the Saipan Chamber of Commerce's scholarship program, as it has signed up as gold sponsor for the SSC Annual Golf Tournament.

Tan Siu Lin Foundation executive director Merlie Tolentino presented last Monday a $2,500 check to Chamber officials, led by its president Joe Guerrero, for the golf tournament that will be held this Saturday on the west course of the Laolao Bay Golf & Resort. Part of the proceeds from the competition will be used for the Chamber's scholarship program, which was established to help local students seeking higher education.

"We support Saipan Chamber of Commerce in its efforts to provide local students opportunities to further their education, which plays a vital role in developing one's knowledge, skills, and values, and helping shape a person's future," said Tolentino.

Our golf tournament supports our local scholars with some well-needed funding for their education path. They are always grateful and so are we. Lastly, we want to thank our hardworking staff for all the Getting in shape after you've been out of the game for a lengthy period is a painstaking process. With summer just around the corner, this has me thinking about how unfortunate it is that we only start to value our health and fitness when we get a wakeup call.

I understand our circumstances have a huge impact on determining what we prioritize. There's only so much physical capital you can invest, especially when you take into consideration the other competing demands in your life, so I get it. Not trying to get all virtuous, but given this unique position I've held for a decade working with people from all walks of life it's imperative I say something.

You have to draw the line somewhere and just do it. Don't wait. I won't bore you with the details because quite frankly, we're all well aware how important it is to eat right and exercise regularly. There's no debating that.

With all that in mind, here are a few reminders to help those of you involved in dropping a little bit of body fat and getting leaner this summer. The first week or so is pivotal. Typically, people getting back into it are off to the races. The harsh reality is, it's almost a given you'll fall off the wagon within the first few weeks—and the drop off becomes more than likely for those of you who are less experienced. Before you know it you've dug yourself a deeper hole to climb from.

There are many cases of folks losing a ton of weight only to gain it back and then some. As such, you're probably better off easing your way into it instead of going all gung-ho.

Implementing small changes is always best. Presumably, many of you will opt to do some form of fast-paced, high-intensity interval workout in an attempt to expedite results. Let me be perfectly clear: it doesn't work like that. What primarily governs that outcome is controlling your food intake and knowing when to put the fork down.

You can't out-train, out-cardio a poor diet.

Another anchor bolt for va'a competition stolen

By MARK RABAGO

While the Northern Marianas Pacific Mini Games Organizing Committee is working overtime to prepare for the quadrennial event the CNMI will be hosting for the very first time this June, thieves again struck and stole another anchor bolt or rod that will be used for the outrigger canoe competition.

Organizing committee CEO Vicente "Ben" Babauta is appealing to the community to help prevent the stealing of Mini Games equipment and those who have leads to the latest thievery to call the authorities to get them back. He said this is the third time an anchor bolt or rod has been stolen from the Saipan lagoon. The latest anchor bolt stolen was situated about 200m off the 13 Fishermen Monument.

"We have completed our va'a lane lines and part of the contract is to put anchors to hold up the buoys and I guess it's already the third time that fishermen or someone out there pulled it out and took it. It's a stainless steel rod that we'll be using to hold the buoys in place. I asked the community to please, please, please fishing is fine but do not pull these rods out because they cost money and we're preparing for the Mini Games."

Babauta said with the Mini Games less than 50 days away, time is of the essence and the organizing committee has little time and not enough resources to replace stolen equipment.

"I asked the community to please do not pull those rods out and please protect them. We'll be using them for the Mini Games and in fact we will have a dry run on May 7 so now we have to scramble to replace those stolen rods. They're not cheap as they probably cost a couple of hundred dollars each and we ordered them off-island. It's honestly an honestly unnecessary action and if anyone out there knows anyone doing this to report it to Crime Stoppers

Marianas Dental Center leaned on clutch free throw shooting in the last minute to fend off a rallying DECM side, 93-90, in the masters division of the Inaugural SCLC Basketball League last Wednesday at the Civic Center Basketball Court in Susupe.

Leading by as much as 10 points with 4 minutes and change to go, MDC fell into a myriad of unproductive offensive thrusts and turnovers capped by Henry Manipon being assessed two technical fouls after arguing a foul call, his fifth and last. Ariel Baul would make the freebies and DECM retained possession and scored in the next play.

Baul, Smokin' Junior Tabora, and Edgar Pangelinan would then hit consecutive baskets to tie the game with less than a minute to go Kanoa, on the other hand, suffered its second setback in as many games, no thanks to Tanapon Unsa, who registered four goals in Eleven Tiger's easy victory. Alan Hinson, Mareko Tekopua, and Richard Steele chipped in one apiece, while Kanoa's lone goal was courtesy of Andruw Omelau.

Meanwhile, Division B games were also played last Sunday with Old B Bank and Hana FC nosing out their respective foes.

Kosuke Sato scored the game winner in Old B Bank's 1-0 triumph over Bangladesh FC, while Zhi Peng Lin lifted Hana FC to a similar 1-0 victory versus Chang Bai FC.
